

- In-home health — The tragic shootings of two home health providers by a man one of them had cared for demonstrated a fatal reality in 2019: those who care for people in their homes are vulnerable to harassment, abuse and violence just the same as those who work in more formal settings
- Preserving ambulance service — We often rely on ambulances for our health and even our lives at critical moments, but reimbursements to ambulance companies for service to Medicaid patients have fallen well behind market rates.
- Nursing home closures — With nursing homes closing at increased rates, we took action to make sure elders and others in nursing homes can find the care and lodgings they need.
- Vaping use and harm to teens — With the use of e-cigarettes rising among teens, especially with non-tobacco flavored products available, there is an urgent need to address this fast-rising health threat among minors.
